Congressional Quizzers Stir Dr. Townsend to Wrath—Landon Has Big Bunch of Delegates—Guffey Coal Act Declared Invalid.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© Western Newspaper Union.

FOR two days Dr. Francis E. Townsend replied mildly to the questions of the house committee investigating the activities of the organization behind the old age pension movement which the doctor started. Then the Californian lost his patience suddenly, refused to answer any more "non-sensical" queries, spoke of "thick-headed congressmen," denounced the committee for its "unfriendly attitude" and asserted the administration was a "hostile force" behind the inquiry. He declared he would form a third party after the November elections.

Finally Doctor Townsend told the committee: "I am retiring from this sort of inquisition and I do not propose to come back except under arrest. And I do refuse absolutely to make any further statement regarding this movement to this committee."

Escorted by Gerald K. Smith, former adherent of Huey Long, and another man, the Californian fled from Washington to Baltimore. The committee decided to ask the house to cite him for contempt.

When he was questioned regarding large sums contributed by Townsend club members the physician said the contributors had faith in him and that "we need millions to promote a movement of this kind and we will get them."

His testimony developed that Doctor Townsend, his brother, Walter Townsend, and Gilmour Young own the assets of the Townsend organization, estimated now at about $50,000, and that Townsend club members have no property right in them.

Doctor Townsend testified he has received about $68,000 in salary, dividends from the Townsend weekly and expenses, but now had only about $300 and his wife about $200 to show for their efforts.

GOV. ALF LONDON captured nearly all the New Jersey delegates to the national convention, defeating Senator Borah about 4 to 1 in the popular vote. This victory gave the Kansan a total of more than 200 votes to start with at Cleveland, and his manager, John Hamilton, claimed he would have at least 300 of the 501 votes necessary to nominate and would win on the second or third ballot.

The statement by Herbert Hoover taking himself out of consideration for the nomination is generally judged to have helped Landon. With Mr. Hoover out of the picture it will be difficult to hold California, Texas, and other potentially Hoover votes away from Landon.

James A. Farley, postmaster general and also Democratic national chairman, told the Michigan Democratic convention he believed the Republican Presidential nominee will be "the governor of a typical prairie state" and that his election, if he won, would be a "perilous experiment." Farley criticized the man he did not name as devoid of experience in national affairs, and predicted that if he is the Republican standard bearer "even Kansas" will not be in the Roosevelt doubtful column.

CONSTITUTIONALITY of the railroad retirement system was contested before the District of Columbia Supreme court by attorneys representing the class 1 railroads and 280 lesser railway enterprises. The lawyers argued that the pension law and a tax law enacted at the same time are together "substantially the same" as the "unconstitutional railroad retirement act of 1934."

The two separate acts, one providing pensions and the other taxing the income of railroads and employees, were passed last year after the Supreme court ruled unconstitutional the 1934 law in which a levy and a pension system were combined.

The government contended that the alleged relation between the two acts could not be proved, and that the railroads were suing, in effect, to enjoin collection of a tax. Such a suit, the government contended, was barred by federal law. The government further defended its railroad retirement system as an exercise of its constitutional power "to provide for the common defense."

POSTPONEMENT of action on the Patman-Robinson chain store bill until next session was urged on the house rules committee in a letter from six powerful farm organizations.

Charging the bill would restrict operations of farm co-operatives by preventing them from receiving wholesale discounts, the letter warned also that higher consumer prices would result from enactment. The measure, already passed by the senate, prevents price discriminations by manufacturers to big customers.

The letter was signed by representatives of the American Farm Bureau Federation, the National Grange, the National Co-operative Council, the National Co-operative Milk Producers' Federation, the Farmers' National Grain association, and the Northwestern Farmers' Union Legislative committee.

SECRETARY OF WAR DERN allocated nearly $138,000,000 for river and harbor improvement projects throughout the country that had been recommended by the engineering corps. Of this sum, $103,458,830 will be used for entirely new waterway and port improvement while $34,408,150 will be employed in maintaining existing river and harbor facilities.

SIX members of the Supreme court of the United States ruled that the Guffey act to control the bituminous coal industry is invalid, and another of the New Deal experiments goes into the discard. This is the act which President Roosevelt urged congress to pass notwithstanding doubts of its constitutionality "however reasonable."

Five justices—Sutherland, Butler, Van Devanter, McReynolds, and Roberts—joined in the majority opinion which invalidated the whole act. Justices Cardozo, Brandeis, and Stone joined in a dissenting opinion in which they upheld the act. Chief Justice Hughes held in a separate opinion that the act was constitutional with respect to the marketing provisions but unconstitutional with respect to the labor regulations.

The court in the majority opinion held that there is no authority in the Constitution for the control of the coal industry attempted in the Guffey act. The act was not valid either under the commerce clause or the welfare clause.

Senator Guffey of Pennsylvania, author of the act, lost little time in introducing a substitute measure, concentrating on price fixing and omitting the labor provisions which were outlawed by the Supreme court. John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, declared that organization would "join in requesting congress to enact the bill at once." He thought the measure would "operate to maintain the equilibrium of the coal industry pending further study of stabilization of the industry."

A plea to all coal operators to support the new bill was made by Charles O'Neill, legislative chairman of the National Conference of Bituminous Coal Producers.

Some congressional leaders, however, thought it unlikely that the new Guffey bill could be passed at this session.

HERBERT H. LEHMAN announced suddenly in Albany that he would not be a candidate for a third term as governor of New York, saying: "I feel the time has come when I may ask release from the cares and responsibilities of the governorship." But leaders of the Democratic party, including President Roosevelt, National Chairman James A. Farley and Senators Wagner and Copeland undertook to persuade Mr. Lehman to run for reelection.

They all agreed that his retirement would be a loss to the state and the party and that he should be "drafted." The immediate political result of the governor's surprise action was that New York again became a doubtful state for the presidential campaign, in the minds of many politicians. The morale of Republican leaders in the state improved, and Democrats began speculating as to which of a group of five or more candidates could be groomed for the gubernatorial nomination this fall if Lehman persisted in his determination.

GENERAL rejoicing marked the inaugural of Dr. Miguel Mariano Gomez as president of Cuba—the first elected by the people since Gerardo Machado. The new executive, a lawyer and revolutionary leader who has twice been mayor of Havana, took the oath of office in the ball room of the president's mansion in the presence of 400 foreign and Cuban officials. The guns of Cabanas fortress across the harbor fired a twenty-one gun salute and on the signal all public buildings were illuminated and thousands of merry-makers began parading the streets.

President Gomez appeared on a balcony and told the shouting throngs that he would do his best to maintain a constitutional government "by the Cubans and for the benefit and interest of all Cubans." In his first message to congress he assured the nation that personal rights would be respected. Among his policies he listed "ample tolerance to all ideas, ample guarantees for all rights and sufficient energy to maintain order and the necessary strength against offenders against the laws."

NEITHER Great Britain nor France has any intention of paying the installments on the American war debt due June 15. And almost certainly all the other debtor nations except Finland will follow the example of the two big ones and again default. British Foreign Minister Eden talked about the debts with Leon Blum, who probably will be premier of France soon, but there was no indication that either one was planning to make a payment. Blum told the American club in Paris he hoped the war debt "misunderstanding" might be cleared up, but he was just trying to be pleasant to the people of both America and France without spending any money.

Of course the debtor nations would like to have the issue cleared up, for as long as they are in default they are subject to the restrictions of the Johnson act which makes it unlawful for any person in the United States to purchase or sell the bonds, securities or other obligations of any foreign government or to make any loans to such a government while that government is in default in payment of its obligations to the United States.

BENITO MUSSOLINI advised Prince von Starheimberg of Austria not to start any domestic trouble because he was ousted from the cabinet by Chancellor Schuschnigg, and when the prince returned to Vienna the cabinet fixed things up neatly by decreeing that the country should have three fuhrers. Schuschnigg, the unofficial dictator, becomes national leader of the fatherland front; Eduard Baar von Barenfels, the new vice chancellor, is national commander of the front militia; and Starheimberg continues as sports leader and head of the Northern Protective association.

NATIONS that are especially hard up might consider the method said to be employed by Rumania. A Bucharest newspaper asserts that government employees have been paid largely in counterfeit money, vast quantities of bogus 100 lei pieces having been issued in sealed bags by the ministry of finance. That ministry then announced that the counterfeit coins would not be redeemed and that persons who passed them would be prosecuted.

THE resettlement administration headed by Rexford Guy Tugwell was declared by the District of Columbia court of appeals to be "clearly unconstitutional delegation of power." In a case involving a model community project in Somerset county, New Jersey.

Going beyond the issue before them, the justices of the Appeals court called the entire relief appropriations act of 1935 into question. The act was invalid and hence RA was invalid, according to the court. Legally, however, none of the rest of the act will be affected by the decision because the other multitudinous activities of the New Deal under the appropriation were not before the court.

DR. ANTON PAVELIC, alleged leader of Ustashi, the Croatian terrorist organization, and accused as one of the "masterminds" in the assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia in Marseille, has been set free by the Italian authorities. Released with him was his lieutenant, Eugene Kvaternik. The two were arrested at Turin in October, 1934, soon after the murder of Alexander, but the French authorities who were working on the case were never permitted to question them and an Italian tribunal refused the request of the French government for their extradition to France for trial.

JOSE LUIS TEJADA SORZANO was forced to resign the presidency of Bolivia by a junta of army officers and Socialists who staged a bloodless coup d'etat in La Paz. Col. German Busch, acting chief of the general army staff, leader of the coup, will be at the head of the government until Col. David Toro, hero of the war with Paraguay, returns from the Chaco, when Toro will be installed as president.

NEWS that Japan was greatly enlarging her force in North China led the State department in Washington to announce that the position of the United States is the same as that outlined last December by Secretary Hull affirming its support of the nine power pact that guarantees China's territorial integrity. At that time Mr. Hull said this country has a binding faith in the fundamental principles of its traditional policy. This government adheres to the provisions of the treaties to which it is a party and continues to bespeak respect by all nations for the provisions of treaties solemnly entered into for the purpose of facilitating and regulating, to reciprocal and common advantage.

At the State department it was said that the reaffirmation of support of the nine power pact does not mean that the administration will abandon its policy of declining to take the initiative in any attempt to curb Japan for violations of the pact. This was attempted by Henry L. Stimson, secretary of state in the Hoover administration, with the gain of nothing but Japanese ill will.

MRS. SARA DELANO ROOSEVELT, aged mother of the President, fell while on a visit in New York some days ago and is laid up at Hyde Park with an impacted hip and cracked bone. She made light of the injuries but Mr. Roosevelt was gravely concerned. He spent the week-end with his mother.

IN GUADALAJARA

Skin Peddler in Guadalajara.

Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

GUADALAJARA, venerable city of Mexico's west, is one of Mexico's tourist meccas.

Sleepers run from Los Angeles through Guadalajara. Rails also link the city with the sea at Manzanillo; still another system ties it with Mexico City, with the Gulf of Mexico, and the Texas border. These railways, with the nation's steadily growing net of motor highways, make Guadalajara an active distribution center. Here cheap electric power, ample labor, and abundant raw materials stimulate various industries. These include spinning and knitting mills, candy and cracker works, and shops famous for their beautiful tiles and mosaics.

The arcades that shade the sidewalks before stores facing a plaza shelter many street vendors. A hat peddler walks majestically along, with 15 or 20 hats for sale, stacked on his own head, one atop the other, like a pagoda. Another carries a long string of sandals. Some are of straw, others of rawhide, and a few made from old automobile tires cut into soles.

Country peons usually wear baggy white drawers; but custom now decrees that this badge of rural servitude shall not be worn in Guadalajara streets. So, at the edge of the city, "pants shops" are open where trousers may be rented. Just check your drawers there and rent a pair of pants, as impecunious American students may rent evening clothes for a party! Changing sartorial standards, however, are destroying this simple industry.

Indians arrive in the city with baskets of assorted fruits, guavas, gourds, tiny lemons, cactus pears and mangoes. On the pavement they arrange little piles—one kind of fruit here, another there; then they squat down, silently awaiting buyers. If you want fruit, buy it, but don't ask questions.

Toys, candies, soft drinks, postcards, newspapers, pottery, medallions of the saints, small melons white on one side like a fish's belly—everything from mule gear and old tools to carved-wood sticks ending in ornate filigree balls for stirring chocolate—are spread out for sale on the sidewalk.

Good Merchandise in the Stores. Inside the large stores, of course, is modern merchandise. Some American women, wise in local ways, say that if the stores don't carry the particular hat or gown they wish, clever native women soon make them—copying, if need be, from no more than a picture from an American fashion journal. Most lingerie, dress goods, millinery, soaps, perfume, and jewelry are sold by French merchants. Machinery, hardware, and such heavy goods are usually handled by Germans.

Few Americans are found in retail trade; they, with the British, are more interested in mines, ranches, power plants, railways, or banks. If you buy any sizable article in a store, the merchant whistles up a street porter to carry it home for you. Persons of position would lose caste carrying a big parcel through the streets. Porters even carry big bags of silver coin to and from the banks—and for some reason are seldom molested.

As you walk the streets of Guadalajara at Easter time, you may see a dummy man, in top hat and morning coat, in a general's uniform or merely in rags, hanging from a telephone wire. Suddenly the effigy explodes, and a small bomb hidden within, and bursts into flame. Then the street crowd laughs and yells, and maybe even shoots at the effigy, which is supposed to represent Judas. Burning him in effigy at this time is a Mexican practice. Sometimes "Judas" is stuffed with bananas or candy which fall out when he blows up, and street urchins scramble for the street.

"Buy your dead man's bread here," a baker's sign may read around All Souls' day. At that time, some Mexicans believe, the spirits of departed relatives return to dine with their families. The dining table becomes an altar, and some foods are served in strange shapes, such as candy skulls, big and little, with cherries for eyes, ribs and leg bones made of chocolate, or cakes baked in the form of coffins.

Many churches in Mexico were built on sites of ancient Aztec temples, the heads of whose idols were cut off by zealous Spaniards. In some churches fragments of heathen idols are built into the walls. After the conquest, Spain built literally thousands of Mexican churches. They dominate Guadalajara.

Devotion of the Peons. Horses and rebels were housed in some of these churches, with priests and nuns deported during the revolutions. But the faithful carried on. Pious peons came for miles on their knees to the churches. Old women, shouting the chants and litanies or counting their beads, crawled to the altars on stiff old knees. Girls knelt with crowns of thorns on their brows, and small boys clutched at the crucifixes.

From Guadalajara out to the suburban church of Zapopan is but a short trip by tramcar; but during an August feast peons hobble out to it on their knees, taking all day. When prayers are over they stage a costume play depicting the Spanish conquest of Jalisco. Then Indian players dress and act the parts of Spanish knights and the local Indian characters of that conflict. In recent years education has been taken away from the church, and the new generation tends to abandon these mimetic dances and dramatic rituals.

The chief edifice in Guadalajara is the cathedral; its twin towers rise over the city, visible for miles. On feast days long strings of lights illuminate the towers, and at Easter the bishop washes the feet of twelve old men, chosen at random from street crowds.

Rushing to aid the king of Spain in the Peninsula war went many men of Guadalajara. Legend says money was sent, too, raised by melting gold and silver plate and candlesticks from the cathedral. In gratitude the king gave this church Murillo's great painting, "The Assumption of the Virgin," still hanging in the cathedral though many attempts have been made to buy or purloin it.

Bull-Fighting Loses Popularity. The bull ring is here, of course; but such sports as boxing, football, and baseball have robbed it of old-time popularity. Despite its continuous appeal to the peon, who glories in its cruel, gory combats, and survival of a few other habits, bull-fighting as a business is on the decline.

Bulls from Spain are still sent to Mexico City, where tourists help support the arena, and some fighting animals are still raised on the West coast ranches for Guadalajara. One of these is the old Rancho San Jose de Conde, in Navarrit, which dates from 1550. It is one of America's oldest ranches. Its output of small, black, savage bulls went on for generations. To perpetuate the fighting instinct, the rule on this ranch was "Kill every bull calf that does not seem to hate men." Such a plan insures a bull ferocious as any wild animal. One young bull on this ranch chased a vaquero up a tree and kept him treed till he nearly died of thirst.

When Cortez conquered Montezuma and founded "New Spain," he had with him one Don Nuno de Guzman, who soon rose to power and grew jealous of his chief. Eager to gain more honors and riches for himself, De Guzman, in 1529, quit the Aztec capital, with picked Spanish troops and many Tlaxcaltec Indian allies, to explore the unknown regions farther west and north. In their travels, De Guzman and his lieutenant, Cristobal de Onate, came upon a huge Indian stronghold, Nochistlan. Fighting ensued, and nearby the Spaniards built their camp, a cluster of huts. Though moved about later to various neighboring sites, a town was laid out about 1530. It was named for De Guzman's home town in Spain, Guadalajara, from the Moorish Wad-al-hajarah, meaning River of Rocks. From the king of Spain the new town got its coat of arms in 1539; so it was really a white settlement nearly a century before the English landed at Jamestown.

By 1560 Guadalajara had become important. Its chief activity was Indian slave hunting, and the driving of these to work in the gold and silver mines. Vast fortunes were thus amassed, but the Spaniards were built; and New Galicia, of which Guadalajara was the capital, then included not only the present state of Jalisco, but much of what is now five or six other Mexican states, reaching up to Sinaloa.

Visit certain old Guadalajara family homes now and you are astonished at the wealth and beauty of heirlooms from colonial days. Hand-made silverware, even table services of gold, heavy Spanish chests bound in leather and copper, miniatures, jewelry, crucifixes and old paintings, guitars, inlaid with pearl, historic weapons, hand-carved tables, and other furniture so heavy that it can be moved only with difficulty. The old hand-made locks on front doors are often so massive that the key itself may be as big and heavy as a common hatchet, say a foot long.

Sumotari, Not Ju-Jitsu.

Real Japanese Wrestling. Ju-jitsu is not, as most people imagine, Japanese wrestling. It is merely their art of self-defense. Japanese wrestling is sumotari, a form of athletics in which every ounce of weight counts. It is the national sport, and very popular indeed; Sumo stars receive fees in excess of those commanded by successful baseball players. They are immensely powerful, but also very fat, and look like huge balls of blubber.

BILLY MINK FINDS SOME QUEER FENCES

When something new and strange you find, Watch out! To danger be not blind.

THE trouble with a great many people is that they are heedless. When they find something new and strange they forget everything but their curiosity. Because of this they walk right straight into trouble. It happens over and over again.

But Billy Mink isn't this kind of a person. My, my, I should say not! He never has been. If he had he would have lost that beautiful brown coat of his long ago, and there would be no

When Billy Came to This Place He Discovered Something Queer.

Billy Mink. Billy has his share of curiosity, but with it he possesses a great big bump of suspicion. When he finds anything new and strange he wants to learn all about it. But right away he is suspicious of it.

After he had discovered the trap set for him at the entrance to one of his favorite holes in the Laughing Brook and had fooled the trapper by getting the fish the trapper had placed in that hole, Billy went on up the Laughing Brook to see what else he could discover. Not very far above that place there was a steep bank on each side of the Laughing Brook. Along the foot of each bank was a narrow strip of level ground between the bank and the water. You see, at this season of the year the water in the Laughing Brook was low.

When Billy came to this place he discovered something queer. It was a little fence. It ran from the foot of the bank straight out into the Laughing Brook to where the water became deep. Midway in this little fence was a gateway just big enough to slip through comfortably. Billy looked across to the other side of the Laughing Brook. Over there was another little fence just like this one, and that little fence had an opening in it.

"Huh!" said Billy. "Huh! Those fences are something new. They were not here when I came down the Laughing Brook yesterday. I wonder what they are for. If it were not for those two little openings I would have to either climb the bank or swim around the ends of those fences, and that would be bothersome. I can go through that little opening there as easy as rolling off a log, but I'm not going to do it. No, sir, I'm not going to do it. There is something wrong about those fences. They look to me as if they had been built just to make me go through one of those little gateways. If that's the case, I'm not going to do it."

So Billy plunged into the Laughing Brook and swam out in the deep water around the end of the little fence. Then very carefully he approached the little opening from that side. The more he looked at it, the less he liked it. Right in the middle of that little opening were some wet dead leaves. "Ha, ha!" said Billy. "Another trap!"

MOTHER'S COOK BOOK

SECRETS OF GOOD FROSTINGS

THE secret of good frostings and fillings for cakes is no secret at all—just use good material, a little care and a good recipe; here are a few:

Boiled Frosting.

Boil together two cups of sugar, two tablespoons of light corn sirup and one-half cup of water until the sirup spins a thread. Pour it very slowly over two stiffly beaten egg whites, flavor with one teaspoon of flavoring and beat until thick enough to spread well. To vary the recipe, add chopped nuts, raisins, figs or dates. Also coconut of various colors may be used to dust the top and sides.

Fudge Frosting.

Cut fine two squares of chocolate and combine with two cups of sugar, one-half cup of milk and one-fourth cup of dark corn sirup. Cook until it forms a very soft ball when dropped into cold water. Remove from the fire, set the pan in cold water and cool, then flavor and beat until thick enough to spread on the cake. For those who prefer maple flavoring use either maple sugar or the maple flavor instead of the chocolate.

Tropical Filling.

Put one-fourth cup of sugar, one teaspoon of cornstarch and one-fourth teaspoonful of salt into a double boiler; when well blended add a half cup of sliced orange peel, one-half cup of butter and one egg yolk; cook until smooth and thick. Remove from the heat, add a teaspoon of lemon juice and spread on the layers of the cake.

ONCE IN A WHILE

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

ONCE in awhile we just remember April and May, not just December. Once in awhile we quite forget All of the hurt the heart has met. Once in awhile some hour or duty Makes it again a world of beauty. Once in awhile our minds recall Joy, and nothing much else at all.

Once in awhile we cease our fretting; Nothing has changed, we're just forgetting.

Once in awhile if that be true, Isn't it always the thing to do? Once in awhile we're done with sorrow, But if today, why not tomorrow? Why can't we whistle, can't we smile, All of the time, if once in awhile?

Pleat, Tailor and Tuck Smart Silks

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

EVERY day in every way women who recognize the importance of selecting materials for the fashioning of their costumes that can be "put to the test and not found wanting," are turning to handsome dependable silks that are really and truly pure silk for the solution of their fabric problems.

The fact that a lavish amount of pleating, tucking, shirring and meticulous tailoring is involved in the styling of this season's smartest apparel is proving an added incentive to insist on silk of the better sort that may be relied upon to yield successfully to these varied and sometimes intricate manipulations.

Three outstandingly important fashion trends are presented in the illustration, each of which demonstrates the chic and charm of silk weaves in the current mode. For the perfectly stunning jacket suit the designer handles black and white printed silk crepe as tailor-perfect as if it were wool. The braid-bound edges of the jacket interpret a highly significant styling detail. As to the white organdy frill, it is a "last word" in accessory chic. Watch for these frilly-frilly effects; they are coming along at a fast and furious pace.

The other standing figure reveals Miss 1936 wearing a navy blue silk sheer with a pleated tunic, for you must know that the pleated tunic is a top-notch fashion for spring and summer. Men's wear buttons go marching down the front of the tunic pictured. Short puffed sleeves follow the latest dictate of the mode. Note that these are designed to give shoulder emphasis as all the newest fashions would have it. A tiny boutonniere and a yellow chamol belt stress the new vogue.

As to this matter of tunics, from all indications they are about to stampede the fashion picture. If in doubt, choose a tunic frack is timely advice, for it is to be tunics by day and tunics by night according to reports from style centers. Some tunics are straight and narrow while other tunics flare about the knees like a bell or a lampshade. Many evening frocks adopt pleated skirts with tunic tops.

Another big fashion feature is the blouse that is all-over pleated like the one shown in the picture. This blouse is of bright green pleated silk chiffon. It is worn with a black silk taffeta suit. Note the pleated frill about the throat. This is a favorite new neckline silhouette. And again please to observe that the sleeves are short and puffed in latest manner. The smartest flower turbans are topeheavy in front. The one topping milady's prettily coiffed head is made of purple silk violets. Purple, green and black is the color scheme of this costume which goes to show how striking the new color alliances are this season.

The new and fashionable bolero costumes bring blouses into the very foreground of the fashion scene. With black bolero two-piece dresses or suits the outstanding color idea is to wear as bright a blouse as the new silk prints can afford or if not a print then let your blouse be of a high-color pleated silk sheer. Anyway, go the limit in matter of daring color for your blouse.

NEW COTTON LOOKS LIKE SILK OR WOOL

Cotton that looks like silk, cotton that looks like wool, cotton as sheer as the gauziest chiffons, cotton velvets, cotton tweeds and cotton laces—all these will march in the fabric parade.

Cord laces will be the tops in spring and summer swank, shown in tailored sports clothes for resort wear now and all-around use later.

Peasant weaves also are slated for high success in natural neutral tones, both in cotton and linen, with bright accessories.

Embroidery, which has been creeping back into the style picture, achieves rampant recognition in the new cotton fabrics. Embroidered surfaces are all over the place, both in soft, homespun type of cotton fabrics for sports wear, and in the organdies and mouselines for evening.

Dark Blue Is Gaining in Popularity for Summer

The increasing popularity of very dark blue (called midnight blue by certain houses and raven blue by others) is hailed with enthusiasm by those who find black too somber. Another characteristic is the growing influence of purplish tones which are affecting the new reds and the new blues, although not yet prevalent in decided purple or violence.

Gray, while not prominent as a plain color, has a strong influence over blues, giving them a slate-blue shade. This influence is seen also in greens, which have the appearance of reseda green and verdigris. A new shade which is strongly sponsored for summer is burnt straw or toast.

Make Gloves and Shoes

Match, Is Paris Decree

Gloves and shoes are supposed to match one another these days. One Paris bootmaker shows pumps which are cut completely in half, one side being of suede and the other of kidskin. These shoes can be obtained in almost any shade and are matched by gloves which are fashioned with backs of suede and palms of kidskin.

PRINT COATS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

A plain coat topping a print frock is not news but a print coat topping a plain frock is latest news from fashion town. The model pictured typifies the new mode. In this instance the redingote is of black and white print linen over a black linen dress. The short sleeves proclaim a popular vogue for the summer. Bright silk print coats with monotone silk dresses, also jackets of gay floral silks that contrast plain skirts will be made a big feature during the coming months.

Book Buttons

Book buttons lend a "highbrow" air to several new mid-season frocks. They are tiny, closed volumes of black enamel whose leaves are edged with gold.

Sheer Navy Twill

Navy blue for town wear has crisp touches of white pique in this attractive three-piece suit of sheer navy twill. The finger-tip length coat is cut on straight slenderizing lines. The striped navy toyo hat is trimmed with white belting ribbon.

THE MYSTERIOUS BALANCE

THE items required for this trick are four match boxes, all of similar make. With them the magician performs what appears to be a feat of jugglery.

Carefully setting the match boxes end on end, he holds them upright between his hands. When he takes his upper hand away his lower hand holds the match boxes balanced. Though he performs several maneuvers with the stack, the match boxes do not fall.

The trick depends upon an unsuspected secret. While arranging the stack the magician pushes down the drawer of the top box. Each drawer in the stack locks with the box below. This makes the balance quite simple. The boxes will not come apart until the magician removes them one by one.

WHO DO THEY WISH TO REPRESENT ?

Who represents what is the query we should put to these many candidates who are entering the field for public office.

The supervisor's term of the first district (our own) expires this year and two new candidates have already filed for the position now filled by the Chairman of Board, Ed Hastings.

First to announce his candidacy was James E. Parsons, editor of the Star News of the Hillcrest district who has been a resident here for seven years and active in civic affairs of his particular section.

Last week Walter Bellon, another well known business man, announced his candidacy. He is a resident of Point Loma and a citizen of San Diego for 28 years. For many years he was a sanitary engineer and a plumbing contractor but is now retired.

Both men will advertise their policies later, but the main thing for us all to learn if possible is the whole story of who they are campaigning for and why, so many people are out fighting for one cause and another, before election, it is well to consider who are their backers and what will be their policies if they are elected. Those who wish to gain the confidence of the voters, if they are wise, will tell all. The whole story is what we want.

Supervisor Hastings has been given full trial and found to be an energetic and honest official, with foresight into the needs of the county in every particular. His experience is of invaluable worth in the position he holds and it would be well for us to return him to the supervisor's post. We know he stands for improvement of our section in every way possible and can be relied upon to look out for our interests where a less experienced person would not be able to do.

The first thing we must know about these new men is exactly who and what they represent.

Here's good news! The Treasury of the United States has announced completed plans to expedite the payment of the bonus with the least possible inconvenience to veterans and for the greatest protection to the Treasury. On June 15th, 2,700,000 veterans will receive thru the mails checks and three percent bonds in full payment of their soldiers' bonus. It means that very soon $50,000,000 will be flowing into commercial channels of Southern California. This should be a boon to trade and in general better conditions for economic reasons. It will mean a cure to some extent for the tedious depression so forcibly felt everywhere. The "boys" are to be aided just when the money is most needed; but it is hoped that as many veterans as possible will retain their bonds until maturity in 1945. It is a cracking good investment worth considering.

Poets who can put tonic words into verse for an admiring public, are indeed, in inspiration to this sick old world. This is why so many so-called verse-writers never get farther along than the mere name. The struggle for fame with them is far deeper concern than real poetry and its sentiment. Poetry therefore, must also be from the pen of born poets. No earthly fame holds greater reward for mortal man than that he may write such inspiring lines that will go echoing down the corridors of time, long after he has gone! Poets, by far, have the best opportunity thru inspiration at immortalizing their fame and influence; they appeal to the common heart and soul, and that includes millions of sentimental humans. It is a matter of common observation that human beings mold their lives, consciously or unconsciously, after some such model that has impressed them some time in life. The poet is said to "learn from suffering what he teaches in song." How many poets have little concern about making money, rather preferring to immortalize his verse! His art is above the material, to him "Workmanship" in the Greek means masterpiece.

California's latest major venture is an annual exposition, proposed on the completion of Boulder Dam. This is just like the California spirit which has always existed. The grounds are to be located in the Great Southland, perhaps Los Angeles, and to be known as the Pacific Exposition Corporation. A sum of more than $100,000 has already been raised for the development of the necessary plans, and this early, offices have been opened. This will be a gigantic undertaking, of determined will and means so commonly known to the progressiveness of the state. Such a name will not only advertise California, but the word "Pacific" will be far-reaching in its advertising the whole West as the greatest Empire of development known at the present time. The final development work of the exposition will not be duplicated by anything that has gone before, but will reflect a freshness of vision and idealism in co-operative undertaking that will make it outstanding to the extreme limit for immense grandeur and originality.

The "safety razor" is a little device but it has made more friends than any patent instrument in use today. Even the manufacturer need not tell us of that. While its friendship is so general, yet it does not or must have a few enemies, the tonsorialist, for instance. For over twenty-five years the safety razor has "paid its way" to the inventor, but the prediction that it would close a lot of barber shops is not true. The record shows that while in 1910 there were 195,000 barbers, hairdressers and manicurists in the country, in 1930 the federal census revealed 374,000. We might wonder if the feminine customer has not greatly increased that number. At any rate there are more men clean shaven today than any time in the history of mankind!

Few realize that there are nearly eight million youths in the United States between the ages of 16 and 25 years, who are unemployed! One million are homeless and several million more are needy students. On account of this situation, the American Youth Act will reach out after these unfortunate people. It is proposed $15 per week for each young man, plus $3 for each dependent, $25 per month plus fees for needy college students; and a functioning body comprised of equal representation from bonafide youth, labor, social service, educational and consumers' service organizations, instead of federal government supervision. Meanwhile the President has set aside $50,000,000 to help meet the needs of youth thru the National Youth Administration. This is to be a fund used as an emergency measure.

Signing up for future Happiness

While you are signing the TIE THAT BINDS, in the belief that it means lasting happiness for you both... why not make sure of it and sign up for an "electric refrigerator while the ink is flowing so freely.

After all, there is something more to this matter of marriage than just marching down the aisle and saying, "I do," at the right time.

There's the future to think about, in fact some newly-weds require a bite to eat now and then. Electric refrigeration will prevent those early marriage "spats" over such trifles as having meals on time, etc.

The California Code of Civil Procedure (section 690 as amended in 1935) definitely places refrigerators among the NECESSARY household articles. "Necessary household table and kitchen furniture including ONE REFRIGERATOR" etc.

Judge Gordon Thompson Seeks Re-Election

Judge Gordon Thompson of the superior court today announced that he would be a candidate to succeed himself. He was appointed to the bench several months ago to fill the vacancy made by the resignation of Judge C. N. Andrews. The primary election is Aug. 25.

Prior to his appointment to the bench, Judge Thompson served five years as assistant district attorney of this county. Before that he was engaged in private law practice for six years with his father, Adam Thompson and brother, Renwick Thompson. He is a graduate of San Diego high school and of the University of Southern California school of Law, and a former president of the local bar association.

Judge Thompson said today that because of pressure of court work, he will be able to devote little if any time to campaigning, this important detail being left to a group of friends.

POINT LOMA O. E. S. NOTES

Point Loma chapter No. 490 O.E.S. convened Monday night, June 1, with Gladys B. Nelson, worthy matron and Nels I. Berge, worthy parton, presiding. Ballotting and initiation were exemplified and the installation of Ruth Bailey as the Star point, Ruth, was an impressive highlight of the session.

Following the close of chapter, members of Point Loma and their guests forgot their dignity and enjoyed a kids birthday party. Mary Lee, Florence Cobb, Laura Rankin, William (Susie) Nelson, Ralph Lathrop and Clarence Fletcher gave their interpretation of just how little Florence's sixth birthday should be celebrated.

Later, in the banquet hall, animal crackers, toys and balloons carried us back to our childhood days and ice cream, and birthday cake, presents and horoscopes were distributed to those present. A handkerchief and card shower was tendered Hazel Lathrop and Bob Burnett, their birthdays falling in the very near future.

Ruth Berndt was general chairman, assisted by Coranna Burnett, Bernice Bull and Gladys Nelson.

Friends and members of the Order are again reminded of the bean dinner to be served Saturday evening, June 6, from five to seven at the home of Florence Cobb, 4645 Saratoga avenue. The evening may be spent socially, and reservations may be made by calling Florence Cobb, BV-4307, or Ruth Berndt, BV-4348.

HISTORY ESTABLISHMENT OF CALIFORNIA MISSIONS

California's famous old Missions, with their historical and romantic backgrounds, annually attract thousands of visitors. Twenty-one Franciscan Missions were founded by the Rev. Fray Junipero Serra and his colleagues extending from San Diego to what is now Sonoma county. Some are in ruins, others have been restored, all are preserved as priceless landmarks. Because of recent widespread revival of interest in the old Missions, Earl Lee Kelly, Director of the Dept. of Public Works, at the request of Governor Frank P. Merriam, has prepared for the benefit of visitors, brief histories of them directions on how to reach them over California highways. For the purposes of this series, the Missions will be taken up in the order of their location from south to north, rather than in the sequence of their founding.

MISSION

SAN GABRIEL ARCANGEL

September 8, 1771

Responding to a petition from Father Junipero Serra, Viceroy Carlos Francisco de Croix in the fall of 1770 sent from his Mexican headquarters permission to establish in California the fourth of the Franciscan missions. The new station was to be under the patronage of St. Gabriel, the Archangel, and Fr. Serra and Captain Pedro Fages, the military commander, decided to locate it near the Rio de los Temblores (River of Earthquakes), a name given to the Rio de Santa Ana when the Portola expedition of 1769 camped upon the banks of that stream.

This mission, founded on September 8, 1771, and named San Gabriel Arcangel, was near a site that later became the city of Los Angeles, and was to be one of five situated about one day's travel apart north of San Diego.

Two padres, Fr. Pedro Benito Cambon and Fr. Somera, were chosen to build the new mission, later known as "Pride of the Missions," and on August 6, 1771, with a guard of ten soldiers, these two marched out of San Diego. In view of the tragic events that came to pass at San Gabriel, due to mistreatment of the Indians by brutal Spanish soldiers, it is interesting to read Father Francisco Palou's account of the founding of the mission as given by Fr. Zephyrin Engelhardt, historian of California missions.

"They traveled toward the north," says Father Palou, speaking of the priests and their military escort, "on the road taken by the expedition of 1769. After marching about forty leagues, they arrived at the Rio de los Temblores. Just as they were deliberating about the choice of a site, a great multitude of savages, armed and headed by two chiefs, appeared and with frightful yells attempted to prevent the founding of the mission.

"Fearing that a battle might ensue and that some might be killed, one of the Fathers produced a canvas picture of Our Lady of Sorrows and put it in view of the savages. No sooner had he done this than all, overcome by the sight of the beautiful image, threw down their bows and arrows. The two chiefs quickly ran up to lay at the feet of the Sovereign Queen as tokens of their greatest esteem the beads they wore on the neck. By the same action they manifested their desire to be at peace with us. They called upon all the neighboring rancherias who in large numbers flocked together, men, women and children, and came to see the Most Holy Virgin. They also brought seeds, which they left at the feet of the Most Holy Lady, imagining that she would eat like the rest."

Father Palou records that "the sight of the image of Our Lady transformed the savages around Mission San Gabriel so that they made frequent visits to the Fathers" and, following the first Holy Mass celebrated under the shelter of boughs on September 8, assisted the padres in building a chapel, buildings and stockade.

With such an auspicious beginning toward mutual understanding it is a pity that the very soldiers sent to assist the priests should have been the ones to undo the good work done by the missionaries. Just when the Indians were going in large numbers to Mission San Gabriel, one of the soldiers outraged the wife of one of the chiefs and in an ensuing clash between the natives and armed guards, the chief was killed. For a long time the Indians remained away from the Fathers and it was not until the offending soldier was transferred to Monterey that their confidence in the padres was restored.

This incident, Fr. Engelhardt claims, delayed the founding of Mission San Buenaventura for 12 years. Commandante Fages fearing to send any soldiers from San Gabriel north to assist in establishing another missionary station.

Visiting San Gabriel in September 1772, Father Serra was delighted to find that a number of Indian children had been baptized, including the small son of the slain chief, but excesses being committed by the soldiers against the natives caused Junipero personally to complain to the Viceroy of Mexico, with the result that the military commander of California was specifically ordered to cease all interference with the padres and their neophytes.

Routine of San Gabriel was interrupted on March 22, 1774, by the arrival of Captain Juan Baptista Anza and the weary and hungry members of his expedition who, after many hardships, had found their way from Sonora, Mexico, to the mission in carrying out instruction to locate a route from Sonora to Monterey. They crossed the Sierra through San Jacinto pass. Discovery of this overland way led Viceroy Bucareli the following year to send out a new expedition from Sonora whose purpose was to found a presidio, mission and colony at San Francisco.

For two years Mission San Gabriel occupied itself more or less serenely with its spiritual and temporal work and then in 1776 the establishment was removed to its present location and construction of new buildings undertaken. In 1796 the small chapel which, in turn, in 1800 was superseded by the existing building of stone, mortar and brick. In that year there were 1,078 neophytes at the mission, 1,953 had been baptized, 869 had been buried and 396 couples married.

In 1776, Father Serra stopped at the mission on his way from founding the Mission San Juan Capistrano and records disclose that he baptized an Indian child there on December 11, of that year. Two years later, November 4, 1778, Junipero confirmed at the mission for the first time.

New troubles with the natives began in 1779 when Governor Felipe de Neve, an enemy of the missions, decreed that convert Indians at every mission should annually elect two alcaldes and two regidores or councilmen and vest them with control of the neophytes. Unfitted for self-government, the San Gabriel Indians became insolent to both the priests and soldiers. And then in July and August, 1781, two contingents of soldiers and settlers arrived from Sonora and from then on, thruout the founding of the pueblo of Los Angeles, there were frequent clashes between the padres and the Indians on the one hand and the soldiers and settlers on the other.

At the age of 68 years, Father Serra made a trip from Monterey to San Gabriel in February-March, 1782, to discuss with Governor Neve the founding of Mission San Buenaventura and Mission Santa Barbara and on his way back north after a second visit in October, 1783, he officiated at 233 confirmations at San Gabriel, bringing the number of persons confirmed there by him to 866. By the year 1790, San Gabriel surpassed all missions in livestock and farm products and was second only to San Antonio in the number of neophytes.

An earthquake in 1804 did considerable damage to the new church and mission buildings, but construction proceeded steadily in spite of more or less continuous disputes between the padres and settlers over mission and Indian lands and increasing maladies to which the Indians fell heir as a result of association with the colonists. An incipient revolt among the natives was quelled in November 1810.

The earthquake of December 8, 1812, demolished the church tower and did other damage, but the priests made repairs and continued their building program, completing a hospital in 1814. In 1813 the neophyte population was 1,600.

With the aid of the San Gabriel padres and their Indians, the pueblo of Los Angeles was enabled to build the Church of Our Lady of the Angels, which stands today in the center of the city of Los Angeles. It was completed about 1822.

From 1821, when Mexico declared her independence and California became a part of the new republic, San Gabriel suffered as did the other Franciscan missions from oppression by a long line of successive political regimes culminating in secularization and confiscation of the mission in 1834. San Gabriel was especially victimized by Governor Echeandia, who levied upon the mission for many thousands of dollars, provisions and farm products for the soldiery. Governor Micheltorena's action in returning San Gabriel to the Franciscans brought only a brief respite to the padres for when Pio Pico became governor their troubles multiplied. On June 8, 1846, Pico sold the mission to Hugo P. Reid and William Workman. A month later, the American flag was raised at Monterey, too late to save San Gabriel from the destruction wrought by greedy Mexican politicians. President Lincoln returned San Gabriel to the Catholic church in 1865.

Self-sacrificing padres carried on at San Gabriel, caring for the few Indians left in the vicinity until 1908, when San Gabriel was turned over to the "Missionary Sons of the Immaculate Heart of Mary," an order that was founded in Spain in 1849. The mission has been beautifully restored and its activities increased greatly during the last three decades.

Motorists desiring to visit San Gabriel from Los Angeles should proceed from the downtown section of the southern metropolis out North Broadway to Huntington drive, keeping on the left hand side of the road which leads into the community of Alhambra. At the eastern limits of Alhambra the visitors should turn at

THE THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY: POINT LOMA

"What Death Really Is" is the title of the new series of lectures to be given in June at Theosophical headquarters, Point Loma. At 3 p. m. Sunday, June 7, W. Emmett Small will inaugurate these and will deal particularly with the question of why we die and will sketch the esoteric processes of death, so little understood by the laymind today.

The aim of these lectures will be to show that there is a real body of teaching concerning this subject, which if brought out and studied and discussed, will not only lift the weight of fear that oppresses so many human hearts when death comes, but will reveal the fact that life is everywhere had we the senses educated to perceive it, and that therefore death is but a transmission of life to other spheres. Knowledge of these other spheres is given by Theosophy and it is this which brings consolation, hope, peace and courage. The study of death is the study of the science of man's inner nature and how it breaks up and re-assembles itself.

Other speakers following Small during the month will be Iverson L. Harris, LaFayette Plummer and Joseph H. Russell.

San Gabriel also is reached via the Pacific Electric Railway from Los Angeles city points. Directions may be obtained at the Pacific Electric depot, Sixth and Main streets. The distance from the heart of downtown Los Angeles to the mission is about 12 miles.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"God the Only Cause and Creator" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon on Sunday in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass. The Golden Text is from the Psalms: "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the Lord, which made heaven and earth."

One of the Bible selections in the Lesson-Sermon includes these verses from the Acts: "And there sat a certain man at Lystra, impotent in his feet, being a cripple from his mother's womb, who never had walked: The same heard Paul speak: who steadfastly beholding him, and perceiving that he had faith to be healed, said with a loud voice, Stand upright on thy feet. And he leaped and walked."

The Lesson-Sermon presents also these passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The metaphysician, making Mind his basis of operation irrespective of matter and regarding the truth and harmony of being as superior to error and discord, has rendered himself strong, instead of weak, to cope with the case; and he proportionately strengthens his patient with the stimulus of courage and conscious power."

BRAINS WERE A. W. O. L.

During the late war a doctor was examining a number of men claiming disability. One chap complained that he was deaf in one ear. The doctor told him to cover his deaf ear and then asked him if he could hear. "Yes," replied the soldier. "Now cover the good ear," he doctor instructed. The man did so. "Can you hear me now?" inquired the doctor. "No," replied the soldier, and wondered why his claim was thrown out.

UNCONFESSED

SYNOPSIS

Lella Seton, young and beautiful and an expert on paintings, is commissioned to go over the collection of paintings in the home of the wealthy Kellers in New York, where a party is in progress. From her window she witnesses a man in another room strike a woman. Shortly after Mrs. Keller sends up word, asking her to join the party at dinner. Lella hastily dresses and goes down. She is seated between Mr. Deck, a critic, and Monty Mitchell, a noted lawyer.

Mr. Mitchell relayed the explanation. "He's gone up to see how his wife's headache is—she didn't come down."

"I know," I said, though I didn't know at all. "That's why I didn't come down—I'd have made thirteen."

It is important that I remember the dinner in the right intervals; at least, it is important to my story. I believe it was only a very few moments when Mr. Harriden came back. He said, quite loudly: "I think she's sleeping—the room was dark so I didn't disturb her." And I recall that Alan Deck looked down toward him intently, as if observing him a moment.

I wondered if Deck were interested in Nora Harriden, if she had been the lady he was expecting in the gallery, and if he was waiting now for news, to know if there was any chance for him that evening. After that I gathered courage and addressed him; and he talked quite amusingly, with his suggestion of a drawl, of a new book; but all the time I had a feeling that he was only playing off the top of his mind, and the under part of it was deeply brooding on some inner matter.

Suddenly I said: "What does Mrs. Harriden look like?"

Then I had his attention. He looked at me as if asking what I meant by that. "You've never seen her?" he said slowly.

"Not unless I saw her coming in. . . . There was one lovely woman in gold pajamas I saw—with dark eyes."

"Yes, that was Nora," he said.

Then, for the second time, a man left the table; and this time it was Alan Deck. He looked at his wrist-watch, exclaimed sharply, and loudly, "Jove, I've got to put in a call!" and with another word to his hostess, took himself off. He was gone longer than Mr. Harriden had been gone. Perhaps it only seemed so to me—but others thought so too, afterwards. I know that when he was away, there was a queer constraint about that table. The talk went on, but as if it were forced; and I thought that people were watching Mr. Harriden furtively—were they thinking, as I was, that Alan Deck had gone up for the chance of a few words alone with Nora Harriden?

Of course I might be wrong; it might not be Mrs. Harriden in whom he was interested; but looking about that table, I did not see who else it could be. I got the chatty Mr. Mitchell to tell me who the others were.

There were six of us women; Mrs. Keller and her sister, Mrs. Crane, too old, I thought, for Alan Deck; and there was Miss Van Alstyn, who might be the one, but who did not seem to click, somehow; and there was a red-haired little piece, Mrs. Watkins, who was on her second honeymoon, I learned—that seemed too soon for another interest.

That made four, and I was five; and the Princess Rancini was the sixth; and though the princess was lovely in a statuesque way, what Mitchell confided of her exaggerated jealousy of the prince did not indicate much time left over for personal distractions with a young critic. Still, she never knew.

If not Mrs. Harriden, it was either the Princess Rancini or Miss Van Alstyn.

I had a strong feeling that people about that table were only making conversation till Alan Deck came back. I had begun to wonder if he were ever coming, when he entered, said something about the rotten service and sat down.

Almost immediately, as if aware that his conduct had given rise to unwelcome speculation, he began to talk to me.

"Did you see the pictures?" he wanted to know.

"You forgot—I left them to you," I reminded him.

"Ah—so you did. . . . You didn't return?"

"No. I'll see them in the morning."

Then, suddenly, he said an astounding thing:

"I say—I want you to do something for me. Will you? After this infernal meal is over, slip up and see Nora Harriden—will you?"

I demurred: "I don't know Mrs. Harriden—will you?"

"Tell her you come from me," he said decisively. "Tell her to take no steps. . . . Remember that. Take no steps till I've seen her. Say I've thought it over. . . . To take no steps."

"But she'll think—" I began weakly.

"I've got to reach her," he said; and somehow his voice affected me deeply, it was so desperate, so urgent. "I can't trust a servant. I can't write. She doesn't answer her room phone. . . . I beg you—"

"Of course I will," I said quickly. My sympathy for him was an unreasonable thing. At the same time I felt a queer pang—it was Nora Harriden in whom he was interested!

"Don't let the others see you," he warned.

"I'll try not—but which is her room?"

"Second floor—on the front. It's next to the last to the north. This dining-room is south, you know."

My mind flashed back. The next to the last; to the north! Why, that was the lighted window I had stared in; it was Nora Harriden, then, who was bidding her marked face there now!

CHAPTER II

I could hardly wait for that meal to be over. Coffee was in the drawing-room; I let myself be last in the doorway, then turned and hurried up the broad central stairs, turning to the right branch. At the door that had been designated, I knocked softly.

No one answered. There was no sound within the room. Then, feeling an urgent need not to fall in that mission laid upon me, I pushed open the door. The room, illumined by one shaded light, was empty. The bed was ready for the night, the rosy silk coverlets turned down, a gossamer wisp of lace and chiffon laid out.

I looked about. There were doors in plenty behind which she might be: I went to each and spoke. No sound behind them.

I went back and tried another door—the closet, apparently—but that was locked. I supposed she kept sables and ermine there. It didn't matter; she certainly wasn't in a locked closet. Another door, half open, led to the dressing-room and bath, and these were untenanted too.

"She isn't there," I murmured.

Feeling like a thief in the night, I came out, and saw Miss Van Alstyn in the hall. We passed, I smiling confusedly, and she with a vague, shallow glance. I hurried downstairs.

Instantly, as if he had been watching, Alan Deck came up, my cup of coffee in his hands.

"She isn't there," I murmured.

"Not there?"

"No. I looked everywhere, bath and all. She simply isn't there."

He stood by me, staring oddly. Then he gave a sort of jerk, and started for the stairs. "Thanks very much," he said as he passed me. . . . I watched him go up; and a queer, hard hostility to Nora Harriden burned in me. He didn't know other women were living.

Now he was looking for her, in some place he had just thought of.

I remember thinking this, while I made a little conversation with Mrs. Crane about the pictures; and then I found myself next to Mr. Harriden. He was a big man, but not stout; he was hard-boned and spare-fleshed. He looked as if he might be merciless.

Then, as the Princess Rancini was moving past us, to the tables being formed for bridge, he caught her quickly by the elbow.

"Paula—run up and see my wife. Will you? I think she ought to see a doctor—she won't for me. You talk her over."

The princess turned on him her lovely face, in which no surprise was apparent.

"She is ill, then?"

"She's cuckoo," said her husband brusquely. "Nerves—she ought to have something quieting."

"But—she was quite all right at tea."

"Was she?" said Harriden grimly. He added, in his tone of accustomed command: "Run up and see how she is, anyway. See if she won't see a doctor. . . . I'd only stir her up."

The princess smiled, and moved obediently to the staircase.

Suddenly I felt sorry for her husband. He had blurted out his own helplessness so honestly; I could surmise, better than the princess, the reason for that helplessness—that slap in the face he had given her. I imagined Nora would not soon forgive that. And I wondered what it was all about—jealousy, of course; and jealousy, I imagined, of Alan Deck. Harriden had the reputation of being madly in love with his wife, and insanely jealous of her beauty.

Watching the stairs, I felt uneasy till I saw Deck return and go into the drawing-room. Miss Van Alstyn was already down. Then, for a moment, I forgot the Harriden affair in my bother over the bridge-playing.

I was letting myself be apportioned to a table, when the princess entered. Harriden and Mrs. Keller were standing together; she went to them and said something. I heard Harriden's reply:

"Why, that's absurd. Where can she be?"

Mrs. Keller answered something; she sent a maid to ask a maid, evidently; for a maid came in for a moment, and denied having seen Mrs. Harriden about the house. Of course, Mrs. Harriden could have come out without her knowledge.

"You ask the others," Mrs. Keller said, and there was a curious moment of indecision. The wave toward the card-tables was stayed in mid-air. People debated with each other.

"If she had a headache, she might go out."

"Her maid might know if she's put on a dress or wrap for outside," said Mrs. Crane practically.

"She didn't bring her maid—I told her she was a fool," said Harriden.

About the house was a general bustle of running feet and voices; evidently the staff was hurrying from floor to floor. Alan Deck drew near me. "It's odd—I didn't find her, either," he said simply.

Presently, as if by mutual consent, we all drifted up the stairs to Mrs. Harriden's vacant room, as if we could get a clue from eying its bright emptiness.

"It's queer," Harriden kept saying, staring about under frowning brows.

He went on: "She was lying on the bed when I went down—said she had a headache. She had certainly had a crisis des nerfs. . . . When I came up, during dinner, I opened the door, not the hall door, but the one between our rooms, very gently, and her room was dark and still; so I thought she was asleep, and I had better not disturb her. She'd complained so of pain in her head, that I began to worry, and just now I asked Paula to run up."

Mrs. Watkins suddenly raised her rather shrill young voice. "You didn't see her, by any chance, when you were up, Alan?"

"No—not a glimpse," he said. "I went to my room for my phone-call."

Suddenly Keller took charge of the rather scattering conjectures. He was a short, stout, energetic man, with a ruddy face, and keen blue eyes. "See here," he said, "this is our house, and Nora seems to have vanished from it. . . . Either she's out about the grounds, walking off her headache or whatever row you had—there was a sudden titter of intimate laughter—or she has cut and run to town. . . . Now let's find out. She couldn't get out of the grounds without going out the gate, and that's locked and she'd have to apply to the lodge-keeper. We'll phone him."

I remembered the high walls, and the forbidding iron gates, that opened for me that afternoon.

But the lodge-keeper, being phoned to, stated that no one had applied, either for admission or departure.

"That settles that—she hasn't gone to town."

"But there are boats," I went on.

Harriden gave a bark of laughter. "See Nora running a launch! Or paddling a skiff!"

"The boatman lives over the boat-house there," said Keller. "We'll phone him."

But the boatman said he hadn't seen any one. And he reported all the boats present.

"Have you any theory, Dan?" Mrs. Keller demanded.

He appeared to hesitate. He gave a quick look at all our curious faces clustered about, and I suddenly felt sorry for him. It was indecent, this public exposure of the man's secret wretchedness.

"We'd had a row," he said slowly, as if the words were dragged from him. "She—she was hysterical. She—she threatened a good many things if I—well, never mind. . . . Anyway, after I'd found her sleeping, I began to be afraid of an overdose of some sleeping-stuff—just dramatics, you know; but anyway—I asked Paula to go up. I was uneasy, somehow."

Slowly, he added: "She's been like this before. But this was a bit worse."

"Well, there's no good talking here," Keller told us. "Nora is probably out walking off a headache down one of the paths. We'd better start out and find her—since there'll be no peace till she's found. I'll get the men started." He went to the room phone.

Mrs. Keller said slowly: "If we knew what she had on—Had she undressed, Dan?"

He hesitated. "No, I don't think so."

"Aren't you sure? When you came down to dinner, was she in negligee?"

"I don't think she had changed."

"She was in those gold pajamas? Well, she can't have gone walking in them, can she?" Mrs. Keller moved toward the dressing-room. "Call Anson, and see if she picked them up," she directed her husband.

Anson, the pretty maid who had been summoned downstairs, appeared promptly—and reported that the room had been dark and empty when she came in to open the bed. She said that it looked as if some one had been lying on the bed without taking the covers off. But Mrs. Harriden was not anywhere about, and there were no gold pajamas.

"She's quite capable of walking out in them under a coat," said Mrs. Crane dryly.

"Perhaps they are in the closet," Mrs. Watkins suggested, and Mrs. Keller moved to the closet door.

"That's odd," said Mrs. Keller, shaking the knob.

"Nora usually locks her jewelry up," said Harriden, "—when her maid isn't here to do it for her. I doubt if the pajamas are there. She wouldn't hang them up. They'd be in the dressing-room."

"Well, we can have it opened, and see. Call the housekeeper, Anson."

"Why bother?" said Harriden gruffly. "We're wasting time. We ought to be out in the grounds."

"At least if she's still in the pajamas, she isn't on her way to town," said Mrs. Keller; and as the housekeeper appeared with her pass-key, she took it from her and turned the lock.

Harriden, for all his disbelief of the pajamas being put up there, was quick to step inside, as the lights sprang on, as if he wanted no hand but his, I thought a little sentimentally, to handle his wife's things.

"They certainly aren't here," he said, his voice muffled by the closet. "Nothing but coats and dresses." He added: "Her gold slippers aren't here, either."

"She may be hiding somewhere, to be dramatic," Harriden said gruffly. I thought how the words must hurt him. "We'd better go through the house more thoroughly, and then the grounds."

So people were detailed to go over the house, with guards on the stairs so that each floor, as it was searched, might be kept from reentry.

I thought then that I had really the solution—that the Harridens had quarreled over Alan, and that she was hiding out, in some neurotic extravagance, to spite her husband for his blow.

He certainly admitted that they had had a row, and that she was wrought up and wanted to pay him off.

No one was discovered in the house. "She's either gone away—or been abducted," Mrs. Keller summed up in her decisive way. "There are plenty of bandits who might abduct Nora—and hold her for ransom; but the house certainly hasn't been entered. I myself saw that the window was shut and locked when we went into the room."

"Anson might have shut and locked it afterward," Mr. Watkins suggested.

"Was the window open, Dan, when you went down?" Mrs. Keller wanted to know.

"I don't remember—think not."

Then Mr. Keller put the question I had been dreading:

"And no one was in the room after that?"

There was a moment's wait. I kept a guilty silence. How could I explain my intrusion there, without betraying the odd trust that Alan Deck had put in me?

The Princess Rancini spoke up. "I was, you know. I went up when Dan asked me."

"And Anson was, of course. She has told us how she found the room. You didn't notice anything unusual, did you, Anson?" Mrs. Keller broke off to demand of the maid who was hovering on the edge of the group.

The girl hesitated. "Why, no, ma'am. It was just empty; that was all."

"And you didn't see any one about? Earlier in the evening?"

I thought it was with a sort of reluctance that she glanced about at Deck. "I did see Mr. Deck once, going down the hall—he might have been standing outside her door."

Everybody turned to look at him then. His room, as I learned later, was in the left wing on the second floor, so there was no occasion for him to be passing Nora Harriden's door.

He said, very casually: "Oh—I went past on my way to the gallery. I'd left a handkerchief there before dinner, and thought I'd get it while I thought of it."

"And I saw Miss Van Alstyn," said the maid. "That was after dinner."

"Yes, I went up to my room," said Miss Van Alstyn. She glanced directly at me, and I felt a horrid premonition. My heart began to hammer.

"Weren't you just coming out, when I went by?"

In miserable indecision I hesitated, the blood rushing to my cheeks like flags of guilt. I knew they were wondering how I, of all people among them, I who knew Mrs. Harriden only by name, could possibly have gone to her room when she was reported sleeping off a headache.

I had to speak—to say something. I felt I could not violate my trust, and yet that was a ridiculous scruple in the position I was in. What was Alan Deck to me?

I said slowly. "Yes, I went up. Before the princess did. I wanted to see how she was."

I had a desperate hope that the inquiry might end there, that they might assume I had been sent on the same errand as the princess. But Harriden had caught my words and cried out roughly: "I didn't ask you to! What the devil did you mean entering her room?"

"I don't answer a question like that," I flashed back.

"Oh, yes, you will," he told me; and stung by the insulting overlordship of his tone, I flung at him: "Very well—I will! I went because, from my window, before dinner, I had seen you strike her in the face. I knew she was hiding the mark, staying in her room; and since I was the only one who knew it, I thought I could go to her, and she might trust me to get her something to put on to cover it."

I had no idea what I was going to say before it was said. For one moment, when I saw his eyes, the sheer savage pain in them, I was sorry; the next moment they blazed red.

"That's a lie," he said. "I never struck her. What do you mean, saying that?"

Uncle Phil Says:

We Do From Motive

Human nature is naturally lazy. We do everything from motive, and the strength of the motive measures the result of the effort.

Some read epigrams and enjoy them; others are so contentious that they want to dispute every one they read.

Hardly anything can make sink the heart of a young man of twenty like being expected to enjoy a job for which he has neither taste nor talent.

Do As You Advise

Children will profit by what their parents tell them if they observe that what their parents tell them corresponds to what their parents do.

When people are deadly determined to call a spade a spade with great frequency, we wish they'd shut up.

In our own personal affairs, each of us thinks he is something of an efficiency expert himself.

Old Sol Is Wise

A sunset never puts on too long a show and it never responds to an encore.

You sometimes have to judge a man by what people don't say about him.

Give too much advice and you'll have it thrown up to you.

It is often twice as easy to do a man a favor who is bashful about asking it.

Household Questions

When serving a steak smothered in onions, squeeze the juice of a lemon over it before serving and you will find the flavor greatly improved.

If the bottoms of legs of furniture are waxed they will not scratch polished floors when moved around on them.

If liquid in which olives are bottled is thrown away when bottle is opened, olives may be kept indefinitely if olive oil is poured over them after they are put back into bottle.

A paste made of scouring powder moistened with ammonia will remove unsightly stains on brass trays. Apply paste, remove when dry, then polish tray.

If you rinse a plate with cold water before breaking eggs on it, add to them a pinch of salt and then stand where there is a current of air, you will have no difficulty in heating them to a froth.

To remove a fresh grease spot on a rug, cover the spot with blotting paper, then press with a hot iron. Cover the spot with magnesia, let it remain for 24 hours, then brush off.

Never serve food in a dish that is too large for amount of food served. It detracts from the appearance of your table.

Keep a small pair of scissors in the drawer with your knives. Scissors will trim the edges of pie crust much more quickly and more neatly than a knife. Also they are very convenient for preparing bread sandwiches.

Beach Clubs Organize

Civic and service clubs of Ocean Beach have joined together in an organization to be known as the Allied Civic association of Ocean Beach. At a meeting last Friday evening, temporary officers were elected, on a committee appointed to draw up a set of by laws, and meeting dates were announced for the fourth Friday of each month, or by special call of the president. The officers elected to hold temporary offices are, Carl Schroder, president Ocean Beach chamber of commerce, president pro tem, and Mrs. Esther Wisdom, secretary. Permanent officers will be elected at next meeting. Clubs and organizations eligible to membership, and which have joined the allied organization include the PTA association, V.F.W., American Legion, chamber of commerce, Ocean Beach Woman's club and other service and civic orders.

Among the problems that will confront the organization are: Cleaning the beaches at the beach city, the establishment of a permanent and efficient life guard contingent, paving of West Point Loma Blvd., the much mooted beach fishing pier, and the erection of ample rest rooms on the beach. Other problems are to be taken up in the near future.

The club is organized similar to the Mission Beach civic club, and when problems that effect the two communities are brought up, they will be jointly acted upon. The problems are to come before the allied body, and will be taken back to the sponsoring organizations for approval. Only those problems which effect the community and for its betterment will be brought before it. The organization in no manner is political.

The various organizations sponsoring the allied association each have four representatives on the executive staff.
